Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

WHEN Texas Ranger Hamer told newspaper men last week-end, "I'll have a report on Clyde Barrow before this week is out," he knew what he was talking about.

Famous American Spy Traps German Agent in Mexico

McMath Meets von Eckhardt, and Nunhoefer, His Nemesis

A SLACKERS CLUB

Nunhoefer Posed as Slack-er and Got on Ger-many's Pay Roll

Editor's Note: This is the seventh in a series of twelve letters written by Sam McMath, formerly of Hope, on his experiences along the Mexican border.

Dear Mr. Norton:

F. C. Rockwell, my employer at Del Rio, Texas, received what he considered a hot tip that an American automobile company was planning to erect an assembling plant at Saltillo, the capital of Coahuila.

Mr. Rockwell figured that if he and I went early, ahead of the boom, and placed a jewelry and novelty store, we might make some easy money. He agreed to finance the venture if I would run it. I was sent to Saltillo to investigate conditions and if they looked promising enough, lease a building for our store.

Only American Aboard

I was the only American on the train during the entire trip from Piedras Negras to Saltillo. In those days, 1919, armored trains loaded with soldiers, preceded passengers trains through bandit-infested zones. Evidence of the revolution from which the country was just emerging, met my gaze at every turn. Masses of twisted steel, remains of burned railway equipment lay along the right-of-way; public bus dingies that had been burned or destroyed by shell fire were numerous; farm homes had been destroyed and tillable land lay idle because equipment for working it was unobtainable. And to what purpose all this destruction? I'll leave that for the sort of war to explain.

I soon fell in with an educated Mexican, a very interesting fellow, who had been studying English. We spent the day pleasantly swapping lessons, and like the garrulous waiters, "we talked of many things; of shoes and of ships and of sealing wax and of cabbages and kings."

The train stopped at Monclova for lunch. At least two food vendors for each passenger lined the station platform crying their dishes. Food was passed through car windows to passengers. A foreigner in school studies at Saltillo, bought a sheep's head that had been cooked without removing

EL DORADO, Ark. —J. L. McClurkin, superintendent of the schools at Prescott, was elected superintendent of El Dorado schools at a special meeting of the school board Tuesday. The matter of electing an athletic director and football coach to succeed Coach W. I. Walton, who resigned to become director of athletics at Ouachita college, was not taken up, according to John Trimble, president of the board. The matter will be discussed with the new superintendent before a decision is made.

Mr. McClurkin has been superintendent of the schools at Prescott for six years. He is a graduate of Hendrix college where he received an M. A. degree and has done the equivalent of Ph. D. work in school studies at Vanderbilt University. He is vice-president of the Arkansas State Teachers association.

British May Open War Debts Issue

Faces U. S. Ultimatum to Cease Token Payments June 15

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—A complete about-face by Great Britain on the war debts question was hinted strongly in informed circles Tuesday with the possibility that the government may approach Washington for a discussion on the subject.

Heretofore the official attitude has been that the United States must take the initiative in any reopening of the debt question.

A report was revived that Sir Ronald Lindsay, ambassador at Washington had offered a payment of 5 million pounds, (25 million dollars) on the June 15 installment.

The attitude of the British government toward the June 15 war debt installment to the United States has been watched with interest since the decision in Washington that a token payment would leave the debtor in default. The matter was brought to a head by the Johnson act, cutting off American credit to defaulting nations.

Spring Football Game Here Friday

Two Picked Teams Will Close Spring Practice Season

Climaxing two weeks of spring football practice, Coach Teddy Jones announced Wednesday that a regulation game between two picked teams of the Robcats would be played here Friday night at the high school athletic field, starting at 8 o'clock.

Pans will be given an opportunity to see what promises next fall to be one of the strongest teams in this section of the state.

Coach Jones made public Wednesday his complete schedule for the 1934 season. It includes such teams as Camden, Fordyce, Hot Springs and Little Rock, all top-notchers in state football circles.

More than 30 men have been reporting daily to Coach Jones. The squad will be divided into two evenly balanced teams, the Reds and the Whites. The starting lineups will be made public Friday.

It was first planned to play a team of all-stars from out in town, but Coach Jones decided that it would be best to divide his squad into opposing eleven's and pit them against each other as it will give all his prospects an opportunity to perform in a regulation game under fire, and the experience will be valuable to them.

Several shifts have been made in the positions of some of the regulars from last year in an effort to fit them into a winning combination. Madison, regular halfback from last years edition of the Robcats, will be found at end, as will Broomfield who has been shifted to the wing position from a guard hole.

Special emphasis has been placed on blocking the past week, and the

Urrey's Body Is Exhumed; Murder Theory Disproved

Death of Former Beard's Chapel Man Last January Investigated

DIED OF DROWNING

Disinterring of Body Bears Out Report of Auto Wreck Injury

Suspicion by Hempstead county relatives that Walter Urrey, native of Beard's Chapel, who was killed in an automobile accident on a bridge near Smackover last January, might have been slain and then placed in the car led to the disinterring of Urrey's body at Cantley's cemetery near Prescott Tuesday in the presence of officers.

Following a minute examination by physicians, officers reported no marks were found on Urrey's body which might not have been caused by injuries received in the wreck.

Urrey's death had previously gone down in the Union county records as due to drowning when his car crashed off Smackover creek bridge into deep water, a place where several fatal accidents occurred earlier in the Smackover-El Dorado oil boom.

Chief of Police Clarence E. Baker and Officer Homer Burke, of Hope, were called to the Prescott exhuming which was witnessed by Urrey's widow, his five brothers, Sheriff Grady Wooley of Union county and Alice Pittman of Nevada county; and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Oren Harris of El Dorado.

The examination was conducted by Coroners Hirst of Nevada and Barton of Union county, assisted by several physicians.

Pair of Cold-Blooded Killers Are Trapped Near Shreveport; Cut Down Before Firing Shot

Sister of Bonnie Held for Slaying of Texas Police

Mrs. Billie Mace Jailed With Brother of Barrow's Pal

CRIMINAL FAMILY

But She Insists It Was Bonnie Who Was the "Wild One"

FORT WORTH.—(P)—Mother and I have tried to reason with Bonnie, tried to get her to come home. But it is no use.

"I guess it is because she is so much in love with Clyde."

Mrs. Billie Mace, 21, had seemed more concerned Tuesday about her notorious sister, Bonnie Parker, and the latter's "wild life" with Clyde Barrow, than about the murder charges she is facing in connection with the slaying of two highway patrolmen.

Refreshed after a good sleep—the first in several nights—the pretty, Auburn-haired woman freely discussed Clyde and Bonnie.

Mrs. Mace expected a visit from her mother, Mrs. Emma Parker, 47, of Oak Cliff. Mrs. Parker had telephoned the sheriff's office asking about her "little girl."

Mrs. Mace's father died 19 years ago. She has a brother Buster Parker, 25, who has been "both father and brother" to the girls. At present he is in Gladeview seeking employment.

Mrs. Mace was working at a sandwich stand in Gladeview when arrested.

Floyd Hamilton, charged jointly with her for the Easter Sunday killings, is about 25 years of age and an old school friend, but there has been nothing more than platonic friendship between them, she said. Hamilton is married and so is Mrs. Mace. Her husband, Fred Mace, now is in the Texas penitentiary.

Hamilton, who is the brother of Raymond Hamilton, is held in jail at Crockett on charges of slaying a penitentiary guard during the Eastman prison break last January in which Raymond and several other convicts escaped.

"I don't see why people should think I chased around with him (Floyd Hamilton)," Mrs. Mace said.

Going back to the subject of Bonnie, Mrs. Mace said her sister met Barrow shortly before he went to the penitentiary and they renewed their acquaintance after he got out.

"They were just a couple of kids," she said. "They got into serious trouble right away and just had to keep going."

"We've tried to reason with her and it doesn't seem to do any good."

Mrs. Mace said her mother last saw Bonnie in March. Mrs. Mace nursed Bonnie about a year ago when she was badly burned in an automobile accident near Wellington. She last saw her sister at Sherman in July.

Bonnie is a small woman, about four feet, 11 inches tall and weighs less than 100 pounds and, emphatically, she does not smoke cigars, said her sister.

"That is just like a lot of other starters," said Mrs. Mace. "I guess it started because of that picture Bonnie posed for."

The picture was found in a house at Joplin, Mo., which Barrow and his gang deserted after a gun battle with police.

Mrs. Mace was anxious for her mother to retain a lawyer. Her alibi is that on the afternoon of April 1, when the two highway officers were shot down on a side road near Grapevine, she was at her home in Oak Cliff taking pictures.

District Attorney Jesse Martin said he would recommend that Mrs. Mace be held without bond.

The ice contained in the human body exists at ordinary temperatures only under a pressure of more than 10,000 pounds to the square inch.

Evelyn Frechette and Dr. Clayton May Guilty of Conspiracy

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(P)—Evelyn Frechette, sweetheart of the desperado John Dillinger, and Dr. Clayton May, Minneapolis physician who treated Dillinger's gunshot wounds, were convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to harbor the outlaw.

Mrs. Augusta Salt, co-defendant, was acquitted.

Dr. May was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $1,000.

Miss Frechette was sentenced to two years and also fined $1,000.

Both were granted a week's stay of sentence.

2 Murder Cases Remain Mystery

Officers Still Unable to Solve Williams and Billings Deaths

Three negro suspects, held in connection with the Glenn Williams murder early Saturday at the Fulton toll bridge, continued to baffle officers Wednesday in their fifth day's investigation of the fatal shooting.

Little information has been obtained from them toward a solution of the crime, Chief Deputy Sheriff Allen Shipp said.

At first officers theorized that Williams was shot down after he recognized a man who stopped to pay toll as Clyde Barrow or some other widely sought desperado.

However, the theory was later discounted with the discovery of possible clues in the case.

The Walter Billings crime also remains mystery. Billings was shot to death a week ago at the rear of his home here when he went to investigate a noise about his chicken coop.

One officer said Wednesday: "It looks like the Billings case was done up in brown paper—and the paper burned."

There will be a pie supper held at the courthouse in Washington Tuesday night, May 29, for the purpose of raising money for the erection of a cunning kitchen building there.

No. 1 'Bad Man' of Southwest Is Sent to Last Reckoning

Officers, Headed by Ex Texas Ranger, Get Them at Lake Hide-Out

NEVER DREW A GUN

Barrow Meets Same Fate He Dealt Out to Dozen Innocent Men

SHREVEPORT, La.—(P)—Clyde Barrow, Southwestern No. 1 desperado, and his gun-woman companion Bonnie Parker, were shot and killed Wednesday by a squad of Texas officers at Black Lake, about 90 miles south of Shreveport.

Barrow, wanted for more than a dozen slayings, several kidnappings and numerous bank robberies, and the Parker woman were slain on a road when they fell into a trap laid by officers.

Frank Hamer, former Texas Ranger; B. M. Gault, highway patrolman; and Ted Hinton and Bob Alcorn, Dallas county sheriffs, engineered the raid.

"We killed Clyde and Bonnie at 9:15 o'clock this morning," Hamer reported.

"They were at Black Lake, a hide-out we had been watching for weeks. Clyde and Bonnie did not get to fire a shot. Their car was full of guns and ammunition, but they did not get a chance to use them."

Killed Instantly

Both the man and woman were killed instantly before they could fire a shot, and their bodies and the automobile were riddled with bullets, ending an eight-year trail of murder and robbery for Barrow and his gang.

Barrow's automobile was racing at a rate of 85 miles an hour when he ran into the officers' ambush.

For many months the two lived a precarious life, barely eluding officers on dozens of occasions.

Stolen cars were their mode of travel.

It had been the opinion of officers for many months that Barrow could not be caught alive, since he had only the electric chair before him if captured.

Two-Gun Bonnie

Barrow was never the leader of a large gang, but usually had two or three followers, the most faithful of whom was Bonnie Parker, who took great pride in her handiness with firearms. On frequent occasions she stood beside the desperado and fired

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Children Need the Right Foods As Well As Sun to Keep Well

Since we have become sun-worshippers, we might follow Old Sol about the earth a bit and see what he does for this children here and there.

Some way or other there is a popular idea that a little savage can live on ground-meal, or thumb out the soft contents of fresh coconut, and just because the sun shines benignly on his naked body all day long, he is the King of all Babymen as far as health is concerned.

But an interesting report from Yale School of Medicine, the past winter, conducting research tests of groups of young children from the tropics, as opposed to a like group from one of our northern states, refutes this somewhat and shows that the sun can do only so much and no more.

Undernourished Tropical Babies

Very little evidence of rickets was found among the tropical babies—the average being less than one per cent compared to about 5 per cent present in their northern neighbors.

But among the hundreds examined, according to the report, many were so poorly nourished "as to be in a class entirely outside of the public health experience of the physicians."

Children need food, and the right kind, to be healthy and well.

True, these children from the sun belt were not savages, but natives of a West Indian island. Their diet consisted mostly of rice, beans, and coffee, "sometimes with a little milk in it." But milk, green vegetables, and fresh fruit were almost unknown to them.

Calories Necessary

Does it not speak for itself? Does it not answer the question of food? We can only call the child on such a diet a starved child. Sun rays contain vitamins but they do not contain calories—and a milkless, meatless, greenless diet will not supply either the lacking vitamins of calories needed.

As a matter of fact the truly savage child, it seems to me, has the advantage, because he forages in a more varied manner, the larger of forest, field and stream. He gets wild berries, fish, coconuts and a nice tender stew now and then, when daddy's gone hunting. He may lack milk after he is weaned, but his mother nurses him long because her own diet is richer in milk-producing elements. Besides, goats are often kept by savage tribes, and goat milk is good.

Unbalanced Diets

I know the diet of black bean soup, rice and coffee. It seems to be ubiquitous among the natives of poorer Spanish America.

We need not shudder. Almost on our doorstep there are children living on much and bread and potatoes. Compare this to the above and it will be seen that there is little difference.

Not always the poorest fail to seek variety. I have seen a mother give a child a dime to get a jar of mustard to eke out a nondescript lunch, when the same dime would have bought much needed apples, or a good kettle of greens or cabbage.

When it comes to milk it is the duty of every citizen to see that every little child has it—all children, if possible, and nursing mothers, too, as well as mothers-to-be.

It won't do to say, "Here comes the sun." He gives the body power to use food, and he grows the food. It is up to us to make the contact.

About 44 per cent of the United States population are church-goers.

The water at the bottom of all deep lakes in temperate regions remains permanently at four degrees Centigrade, or 39 and one-fifth degrees Fahrenheit.

Bulgaria claims more centenarians than any other country. There are 58 Bulgarians who claim to be more than 100 years old, 85 are men and 73 women.

A growing presidential business. The White House has had to take over a couple of rooms in the State, War, and Navy Building for its mail.

The 17-year-old daughter of Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes is named Mary Senate Howes, because Howes was a South Dakota state senator when she was born and the legislature at once passed a law providing that all girls born at the hour she arrived must be given the middle name of "Senate."

DONNA of the BIG TOP

REGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAI, who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers. When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANTFATHER SIDDAI's farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She is admired by this deception but keeps it up, even when BILL SIDDAI, Madeline's cousin, asks her to marry him.

Meanwhile Madeline marries CON DAVID, animal trainer with the circus, and takes part in the animal act.

MRS. PLANTER, housekeeper on the farm, about Donna a bonfire announcing marriage to Con in the circus arena on account of Donna's absence. Donna discharges her grandfather SidDAI has a stroke. Donna writes to Madeline about her grandfather's illness.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

WHILE Madeline was trying to summon the courage to pass Trafford and, if possible, to ignore him, Con appeared in the corridor. The former boss canvasser stepped toward the animal trainer. Madeline saw her husband's slender body stiffen and his dark eyes flash fire.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded.

"I'm waiting to see Madeline. What did you suppose?"

"Then beat it! She's my wife now and she hasn't any time for you."

"Is that so?" Trafford lurched forward until he towered over the smaller man. "Is that so? Well, she had time for me down town today. Didn't she tell you I was coming out here this afternoon?"

"Get out!" Con's voice had thickened with suppressed passion. "You're a good-for-nothing bum, Madeline."

"Bum, am I? Hah! So I'm a bum! Well, the little Miss Purty who's your wife didn't think I was a bum when she palled around with me. She didn't think I was a bum when she used to kiss me and call me her 'big red-headed boy' or."

Con's iron fist shot out and caught Trafford on the jaw before he could complete the sentence. Madeline screamed and ran forward just as the former canvasser, staggered by the unexpected blow, stumbled against the frail walls of the passageway.

"He's lying, Con!" Madeline wailed. "He's lying, I didn't—"

"I wouldn't put it past you," Con rasped, pushing her aside.

Trafford rubbed the blood from his chin and snarled, "Lying, am I? I don't have to lie! Everyone in the circus knows about her and me. Everyone knows she was the circus' sweetheart. She played you for a sucker and only a—"

"You say that again and I'll wipe up the grounds with you!" Con cried. He leaped forward and, with the agility that many times had made it possible for him to avoid death that seemed inescapable, he bore the half-drunken giant to the floor.

"What's the matter? What's going on?" Instantly the runaway was thronged with performers in various stages of dress and undress.

"Where's Renfro?" shrieked La Delle Matilde. "Someone separate them. Con will kill him!"

A HUSKY workman jumped forward and tore the animal trainer from Trafford's writhing body. Madeline, shivering and sobbing, huddled against a pole. Trafford stumbled to his feet, muttering maledictions under his breath, and staggered through the crowd and out of the tent.

"What happened?" shrieked one of the women.

"None of your business," Con retorted. He brushed the sawdust from his costume of yellow satin and purple velvet, caught his wife by the arm and almost dragged her back to his dressing room.

There he flung her into a chair and faced her, his eyes blazing with disgust and loathing. "A pretty mess!" he cried, pacing the floor. "And the damnable part of it is, it's true!"

"It isn't!" Madeline protested. "I swear to God it isn't true, Con! I did meet Trafford down town, but that was my fault! I hate him! You know what reason I have to hate him! He was the cause of Donna's falling! He tried to kill me—"

"Yes—because you played fast and loose with him. A canvas man! My God, a star performer mixed up with a canvas man! And I had to soil my hands with his dirty hide! What did he call you, 'the circus' sweetheart'?"

"I thought there was any truth in that, so help me, I'd take your white throat between my two hands and choke the life out of you!"

"There isn't any truth in it! I swear there isn't! And I never was his sweetheart! Never! He wanted to marry me, but I couldn't help that!" Madeline threw herself on her knees, clinging with both arms to his body. "You've got to believe me, Con! You've got to."

"Oh, stop the melodrama! I wouldn't believe you on oath. Get up and fix your make-up and your hair. You look a fright."

Hiccoughing with sobs, she rose and repaired the damage done to her lips and cheeks. Five minutes later when she entered the arena on one to the audience would have trembled that the smiling girl in yellow satin trousers and gold embroidered velvet coat had just gone through an emotional crisis.

MADELINE, however, and the sullen Trafford remembered vividly the scene in the runway. The others who had witnessed it erased it from their minds.

Because the circus grounds were so far from the business district, Con and Madeline ate dinner in the mess tent. During the meal Con had nothing to say, but after he had finished his coffee he turned to her.

"How about taking Lucy through her paces tonight?" he asked.

"You mean—without you?"

"Yes. There always has to be a first time, and this is as good as any."

"But you know I'm not ready! You know I'm afraid of her." Madeline stammered.

"I don't see why. She obeys you as well as she does me, and the only difference will be in having an audience behind the ropes instead of the gang looking on."

"But I'm nervous and—oh, no, tonight, Con!"

"Yes, tonight. Renfro is sore about that fracas this afternoon and we've got to do something to make him forget it." Con's eyes, always hypnotic, held hers.

"I see," she said, white-lipped. "This is the way you are going to pay me back for what happened."

"If I wanted to pay you back," Con drawled, "I'd find some other way than to have you do an act that's going to put us on velvet on the big time. Come on—let's see what sort of mood Lucy's in and I'll tell Renfro he can announce the new turn."

"No," Madeline protested. "No!"

But she followed him from the mess tent to the animal cages and, because he will melted like wax against his, she stepped into Lucy's cage, spoke to her and even stroked the coarse brilliant coat on her back.

"Like a kitten," Con chuckled. "When Lucy gave in she gave in with a vengeance. Take a long walk and make up your mind to knock 'em cold tonight."

"Judas!" Madeline muttered to herself as he kissed her in parting.

THERE were suicidal thoughts in her mind as she walked along the country road past a row of shanties where groups of colored children played. Beyond the great piles of sandbags that formed the levee was the river. If she should fling her body into its muddy, turbid water Con wouldn't care.

No one would miss her. Least of all, the man to whom she had given her deepest devotion.

She reached the levee and mounted it. Suddenly, looking down at the water, darkening with nightfall, death became more repellent than life.

No, she would not die. No man should ruin her career! She would do as she had planned, jump the show, bid Con farewell, forget him and find peace on the farm. If her return hurt Donna—well, it was just too bad. Madeline couldn't help it now.

The night air was filled with the heady sweetness of semi-tropical blossoms, stronger because of the heavy dew. Madeline turned and walked away quickly. In the distance she could see the lights of the circus train on the siding and the blaze that rose from the grounds.

Drawing nearer, the raucous voices of the "barkers" and ballyhoo men and the blatant music of the steam calliope intoned her that she must hurry or she would miss the opening of the performance.

And, because she was so accustomed to the routine that she could not resist it, Madeline hurried. Once more her decision to live her own life went for naught and she bowed to the stronger will of the man she had married.

Texarkana Firemen to Play Locals at Fair Park

Ladies Day will be observed here Thursday when the Storks battle the Two States league-leading Texarkana firemen at Fair Park. All ladies will be admitted free.

A victory for the Storks would advance them to within a game and a half of the leaders, Elliott, the only Hope pitcher to beat the firemen this year, is slated for mound duty. He will be opposed by Dallas Johnson, who has two victories by his credit over the locals.

The game will start at 4:30 o'clock.

the eyes. He picked the meat off that hideous thing with those dead eyeballs staring at him. The sight sickened me. I bought tamales and a glass of milk. When we reached Saltillo at 7:30 p. m. I was so hungry I could have eaten a fried tom-cat and relished it.

Saltillo is a quaint old city of 45,000
where the primitive and modern vie for supremacy. Many of its buildings, particularly the Governor's Palace,
Casino and Cathedral are beautiful.
Streets are paved with cobble stones
where paved at all.

The charm of the old city and its kind hospitable people fascinated me, but I soon discovered that it wasn't
the place for a man in my condition, due to the lack of proper food. Service at Hotel Conchalia was excellent,
but I couldn't make it my home, prices
were prohibitive.

German War Intriguer

I decided to return to Texas by a different route and visit Monterrey, the foremost industrial city in the republic. When I boarded the train at Monterrey, after just a short visit, I noticed a private car attached to the rear. Armed guards were stationed at the vestibules. I soon learned that the car was occupied by a celebrity, Gen.
von Eckhardt, German ambassador to Mexico. I will recall that von Eckhardt was the bird who tried to induce Japan and Mexico to declare war on us while our armies were in France.

With the war over, and the old German regime ousted, von Eckhardt found himself a man without a country. He requested permission to sail from Vera Cruz to Spain, Washington promptly forbade that. He was ordered to come through the United States and sail from New York. Our officials wanted to question the gentleman about his nefarious and enterprising activities.

We were held at the international bridge at Laredo over two hours
while baggage was being searched.
Von Eckhardt carried about 20 trunks.
A customs officer told me that they didn't find anything of an incriminating nature in his trunks, but in his personal bags they found $75,000 in gold United States bonds. He may have hated us but he evidently entertained a most profound respect for our securities.

Once across the bridge, von Eckhardt, his family and retinue, were taken in charge by two U. S. Secret Service men—Captain Lawrence and a tall, rather handsome young fellow named Nunhofer. I was acquainted with Captain Lawrence, but I had never seen Nunhofer before. When Nunhofer greeted von Eckhardt, the old German's countenance registered a look of surprise that was comical to behold. They carried on an animated conversation for several minutes. The incident struck me as being strange at the time; but not until two years ago, when I read an article in Liberty
about Nunhofer, by Sidney Sutherland, was it explained to me.

An American Spy
According to Sutherland, Nunhofer
is a descendant of a German family that settled in Texas about 80 years ago. He speaks German, Spanish and English fluently. When we entered the World War, he became a secret service operator and was sent to Mexico City where he posed as a German-American banker. By that time Mexico was harboring quite a president, Mrs. Arthur Swanke, who also led a very interesting program on "Memories." During the business period plans were perfected for the annual poppy sale on Saturday. Following the meeting the hostess served delightful refreshments.

Clyde's Boast

DALLAS, Texas. — When Raymond
Hamilton, Clyde Barrow's old pal, started talking in a Texas jail, Barrow sat down in some hide-out and wrote a letter to District Attorney King's office in Dallas.

Barrow "signed" his letter with a thumb-print, which proved conclusively that the letter was genuine.
Here is the letter:
Mr. King: So Raymond Hamilton
never killed anybody. If he can make a jury believe that I'm willing to come in and be tried myself. Why don't you ask Ray about those two policemen that got killed near Grapevine?
And while you are at it better talk it over with his girl friend, Bonnie and me were in Missouri when that happened but where was Ray? Coming back from the West bank job wasn't he? Redhot, too wasn't he? I got it straight. And ask him about that escape at Eastham farm where that guard was killed. Guess he claims he doesn't know he fired any shots there don't he? Well if he wasn't too dumb to know how he put a clip in an automatic he'd have fired a lot more shots
and some of the rest of the guards would got killed too. He wrote his lawyer he was too good for me and didn't go my pace. Well it makes me sick to see a yellow punk like that playing baby and making a jury cry over him. If he was half as smart as me the officers couldn't catch him either. He stuck his fingerprints on a letter so here's mine too just to let you know now this is on the level.

X Clyde.

jumpy to get rid of those yellow wheels on his car and ask his girl friend how they spent Easter.

squad has shown a great deal of improvement in this phase of the game.
Coach Jones expressed a great deal of approval concerning the ability of Wingfield Stroud and Luther Spears, stocky halfbacks, who have been clearing the way in scrimmage for the ball carriers. These two boys about the same size, weight and speed, give indications of causing a great deal of worry for Bobcat opponents next fall,
and at the present time are head
and shoulders above the remainder of the backs as far as interference

colony of slackers.
Nunhofer proceeded to organize a slacker club. Officers were elected and regular meetings held. On one occasion the club was banqueted at von Eckhardt's expense. Nunhofer obtained the name and home address of every one of those despicable cowards. Most of them were caught when they returned to this country after the war was over; but some are still in Mexico.

So clever was Nunhofer's work that he actually got himself on Eckhardt's payroll as a German spy! No wonder the old Dutchman looked so flustered gasted when he met Nunhofer at Laredro and realized how cleverly he had been duped.

During the trip from Laredo to San Antonio, Capt. Lawrence told me that von Eckhardt had expressed himself as being uneasy for fear that our people would make a demonstration along the route and frighten his family. He claimed he wasn't worried about himself, but dreaded to have his family humiliated. They weren't noticed in any of the little Texas towns through which we passed, but when the train reached San Antonio, soldiers at the railroad station began yelling: "Where is the kaiser, we want to see the kaiser." Von Eckhardt heard them and I noticed that it was the High and Mighty himself and not his family that darted into the Pulman drawing room and locked the door!

The American automobile plant at Saltillo turned out to be a big stock-selling scheme. The promoters can accuse the Federal government and were prosecuted, but managed to squirm out of the mess after paying some costly attorneys' fees.

proper legislation for abolishment of the National Recovery Administration.

Pending the completion of the Congressional inquiry, Britten would have the Review Board maintained "as an integral part of the National Recovery Administration." Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, proposed that President Roosevelt that the review board be abolished "forthwith." The administration intends to allow the Darrow board to expire at the end of this month.

Nye Makes Charges

Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, who originated the proposal for the Darrow board's study of the situation of little business under the codes, said that the government was fostering monopoly.

Nye said that "in the attitude shown by the departments of the government there is little or no sympathy left for the small business man."

Ferry "Regimentation"

The president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Henry
I. Harriman, said the business man felt the industrial recovery act had done much good, but there also was a "widespread fear than an act, based on government approval of such regulations, might become an autocratic act, for the regimentation of business
by the government.

His remarks were made in an address on "What Business Is Thinking" at Brooklyn before the American Association of Advertising Agencies.
Harriman said that "most of us will concede that the major difficulties with which trade and industry are concerned are the outgrowth of un-directed and over-zealous competition which, in the long run, benefits nobody."

To Abandon No Codes

Under vigorous pressure from codes industries for continuance of their agreements, Hugh S. Johnson has come to the conclusion that no codes can be abandoned outright by NRA despite the grief that some have caused the administration.

He has laid before President Roosevelt, he said today, a plan for "ration-alization" of the service trade codes,
hotels, beauty parlors, restaurants, barber shops, dry cleaners, etc., which sell service but not goods—and he still hopes to cut down the great number of miscellaneous code groups by merging all small industrial codes into the largest groupings which can economically be formed.

Norris Again Beaten
WASHINGTON.—(P)—For the second time in as many days, the senate
Tuesday rejected the Norris constitutional amendment to abolish the Electoral College, but the vote was so close that two changes could have put it through.

Fifty-two senators voted for the amendment, but 29 regular Republicans and Democrats combined to block the two-thirds majority required.

The outcome was a bitter disappointment for Senator Norris. He plans to continue his fight for the proposal,

which is designed to make it practicable for independent candidates to run for president.

In the debate Tuesday, Senator
Steiwer, Republican, Oregon, warned that instead of assuring the election of popular candidates for president, it might cause their defeat by throwing elections into the House of Representatives. The inevitable result of the amendment, Steiwer said, would be a large number of independent candidates which would prevent any one from receiving the majority vote required for election.
